Colorado National Speedway Next for King of the Wing

June 22, 2019 – Mountain Home, ID, King of the Wing (KotW) Competitors are excited to be going to a brand-new track, Colorado National Speedway, July 5th and 6th. Although the series has competed at the ½ - mile oval in Dacono, CO, in 2017 and 2018 the track was completely repaved last month. In the past drivers faced an abnormal dip in turn 2. With the entire track surface ground and repaved CNS GM, Brian Laurence reports, “The track is smooth as glass and fast.” Some drivers liked the dip. Oregon native, Aiden Spiers said, “It gave the track character,” and was a little disappointed when he heard of the improvements made to the racing surface.

With the new surface the track will be fast, how fast will it be? Canadian native, Jason Conn holds the fastest KotW qualifying lap at CNS of 14.013 on Aug 19, 2017. The fastest Sprintcar lap recorded at CNS is 13.248 by Nick Haywood on May 19, 2007. Eric Humphries, Bobby Santos, Aaron Pierce and Chris Mueller are just a few of the drivers that have their sights set on setting at least a new KotW record.
